ABOUT SEMINAR

Departments of languages in India originated in the colonial assertion of supremacy of European literatures. The Indian literature in Hindi and English has acquired its existence in current scenario. As languages, Hindi & English are being considered to have global advantage for employability and mobility. As Literature, represented by the canons, it projects an academic discipline that has been institutionalized by the colonizers as a pursuit of values. The changing positions of Hindi & English over decades have made it necessary to rethink both pedagogy and teachers' roles in the classrooms. The seminar aims to provide teachers & researchers in higher education with opportunities for professional development through the exchange of ideas and classroom practices as well as teaching and research in Hindi & English Literature.
